Student's Right to Know Disclosure Completion Rates

The Student Right-to-Know Act requires an institution that participates in any student financial assistance program under Title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (as amended) to disclose information about graduation rates to current and prospective students.

The 2008 Cohort Completion Rate for students in full time programs at Denver School of Nursing was 81.7%. This rate is based on the 263 students who started their training between September 1, 2008 and August 31, 2009. Of the 263 students who started their program, 215 students completed their program of study within 150% of normal completion time for the longest eligible program offered by Denver School of Nursing. The above data excludes 3 students whose last date of attendance was 30 days or less after the first class day of their program that is greater than one academic year and students whose last day of attendance was 15 days or less after the first class day of their program that is less than one academic year.

Also, see the attached chart for disaggregated rates in accordance with the Higher Education Opportunity Act of 2008.
